Letters of Transmittal

Her Honour the Honourable Vaughn Solomon Schofield,
Lieutenant Governor of Saskatchewan

May it Please Your Honour:

In accordance with Section 63(1) of The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, I have the pleasure to transmit to your Honour the 2012-13 annual report of the administration of this Act and the Regulations within each government institution during the period April 1, 2012 to March 31, 2013.

Respectfully submitted,

Gordon S. Wyant, Q.C.
Minister of Justice and Attorney General

Governing Legislation

The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act

The Act has two main purposes:

- It provides a right of access to records in the possession or control of provincial government institutions; and
- It establishes protection of privacy rules specifying how the government collects, uses and discloses personal information.

The Act applies to records maintained in written, photographic, audiovisual, electronic and other formats.

Government Institutions

The Act applies to all ministries, secretariats and similar agencies of the executive government of Saskatchewan. The Regulations extend that coverage to a broad range of Crown corporations, boards, commissions and others prescribed as government institutions.

The Act applies individually to each government institution. The head of the government institution, as defined in the Act, is responsible for many decisions under the Act, including responding to applications for access. Under section 60 of the Act, the head may delegate the powers to one or more officers of the government institution.

Access to Records

The Act gives individuals the right of access to records of Saskatchewan government institutions. The Act sets out the rules that govern the process, including:

- how a government institution must respond;
- the collection of fees to prepare the records for response, including when to provide a cost estimate and when the head may waive those fees;
- a 30-day time limit for a response, which may be extended in accordance with the Act;
- reasons for which access to all or part of a record may be denied; and
- the right of the applicant to request a review by the Information and Privacy Commissioner in certain circumstances.

Privacy

The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act establishes rules for the collection, use and disclosure of personal information by the Government of Saskatchewan and its agencies, thus helping to protect individual privacy.

Government institutions are individually responsible for protecting the privacy of personal information in their possession or control.

Ministry of Justice

Role of the Ministry of Justice

The Ministry of Justice (the Ministry) provides direction and support to government institutions and to the public as it relates to The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act. The Ministry:

- provides legal advice to government;
- provides a leadership role within government on access and privacy issues, including the collection of statistical information related to access to information requests and the preparation of this annual report;
- prepares and maintains access and privacy tools, such as guidelines, checklists and administrative procedures;
- provides and supports training and awareness regarding access and privacy; and
- maintains a website providing information to the public, government institutions and local authorities to help with understanding both the access to information and the privacy components of the legislation (www.justice.gov.sk.ca/accessandprivacy).

Significant Activities in 2012-13

The Ministry continued efforts to raise awareness of obligations under the Act. This included:

- delivering training sessions;
- hosting a half day Access and Privacy Forum in April 2012 for government officials to improve knowledge of the law and consistency of practice;
- organizing and delivering a government-wide Privacy and Security Awareness Month in May 2012 which provided government employees an opportunity to learn more about access and privacy laws, security of information and records management in a conference and exposition environment;
- hosting a successful Saskatchewan Access, Privacy, Security and Records Management Forum in June 2012;
- continuing development of standardized guidelines and interpretive materials to improve understanding and compliance with the law; and
- continuing to respond to requests for assistance from government, local authorities and the public to help with understanding and compliance with access and privacy matters.

Reports

The Ministry collects and reports statistical information regarding the exercise of and compliance with access rights under the Act. These reports provide statistical information both by individual government institutions and by the total provincial government administration.

The statistical reports are in the Appendix and include:

Table A - Freedom of Information Statistical Summary Report

- Table A provides an overview of access to information requests processed by all government institutions. It includes the total number of applications received by government, the status of the applications, the processing time to complete the applications, the fees estimated and collected to process requests for the fiscal years 2008-09 through 2012-13.

Table B - Exemptions Used to Deny Access

- Table B presents a statistical summary of the exemptions applied to deny access for the fiscal years 2008-09 through 2012-13. These statistics are presented by mandatory exemptions, discretionary exemptions and other.

Table C - Freedom of Information Statistics by Institution - Applications for General Information

- Table C is a statistical report showing the number of general information requests received by each government institution, the action taken on those requests and the fees estimated and collected. If an institution is not listed, it did not receive any general information requests during the 2012-13 fiscal year.
- Applications for general information are requests for records in the possession or under the control of a government institution other than those described as personal information in section 24 of the Act.

Table D - Freedom of Information Statistics by Institution - Applications for Personal Information

- Table D shows the number of personal information requests received by each institution, the action taken on those requests and the fees estimated and collected. If a government institution is not listed, it did not receive any personal information requests during the 2012-13 fiscal year.
- Applications for personal information are requests for records in the possession or under the control of a government institution that are about an identifiable person that is recorded in any form, as described in section 24 of the Act.

Analysis

Number of Access to Information Requests Processed

In 2012-13, provincial government institutions processed a total of 2,483 access to information requests – 1860 requests for personal information and 623 for general information. This is a 56 per cent increase over the 1,591 processed in 2011-12 and a substantial increase over the previous four-year average of 1,134.

In 2012-13, the number of requests for general information rose 21 per cent from 2011-12, while the number of requests for personal information rose 73 per cent.

Number of Access to Information Requests Processed 2008-09 to 2012-13

Access Request Processing Times

The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act provides a 30-calendar-day time period for responding to access requests. There are provisions in the Act to extend the response time up to an additional 30 days in limited circumstances (outlined in section 12 of the Act).

On average, in the fiscal years 2008-09 to 2012-13, provincial government institutions have responded to access requests within 30 calendar-days 85 per cent of the time. When combined with the allowable extension of 30 calendar-days under section 12 of the Act, the average response rate rose to 96 per cent over this same five-year period. In 2012-13, government institutions responded within 30 days 93 per cent of the time and within 60 days 99 per cent of the time, well over the five-year average within 30 calendar-days and just over the five-year average within 60 calendar-days.

Application Outcomes – General Information Requests

Table A, in the Appendix, shows the status of applications received by government institutions including: if access to the record was granted, denied, or partially granted; if the Act was not required for access; if the record did not exist; or if the record could not be found.

The following chart shows application outcomes for access to information requests for general information. This includes results for the 2012-13 fiscal year and the average of the four previous fiscal years (2008-09 through 2011-12).

In 2012-13, 48 per cent of requests for general information were fully granted. This is equal to the number of requests that were granted in 2011-12 and is above the four-year average of 43 per cent. The number of access requests fully denied in 2012-13 was three per cent, below the previous four-year average of eight per cent. The number of access requests for general information that were partially granted was 13 per cent, down from the previous four-year average of 16 per cent. The number of access requests for general information where the records did not exist rose from the previous four-year average of 30 per cent to 35 per cent in 2012-13.

Note: Numbers are rounded and may not add up to 100 per cent

Application Outcomes – Personal Information Requests

Figure 4, below, shows the outcomes for access to information requests for personal information. This includes the results for the 2012-13 fiscal year and the average of the four previous fiscal years (2008-09 through 2011-12).

In 2012-13, 29 per cent of access requests for personal information were fully granted. This is a decrease from 2011-12 (35 per cent) and a small increase from the previous four-year average of 28 per cent. The number of access requests partially granted in 2012-13 was 34 per cent. This is an increase over the four-year average of 30 per cent. Finally, in the 2012-13 fiscal year, 0.2 per cent of requests for personal information were fully denied, a substantial decrease from the four-year average of nine per cent. The number of access requests for personal information where the records did not exist rose from the previous four-year average of 29 per cent to 37 per cent in 2012-13.

Application Outcomes (Personal Requests)
2012-13 Compared to Four-year Average (2008-09 to 2011-12)

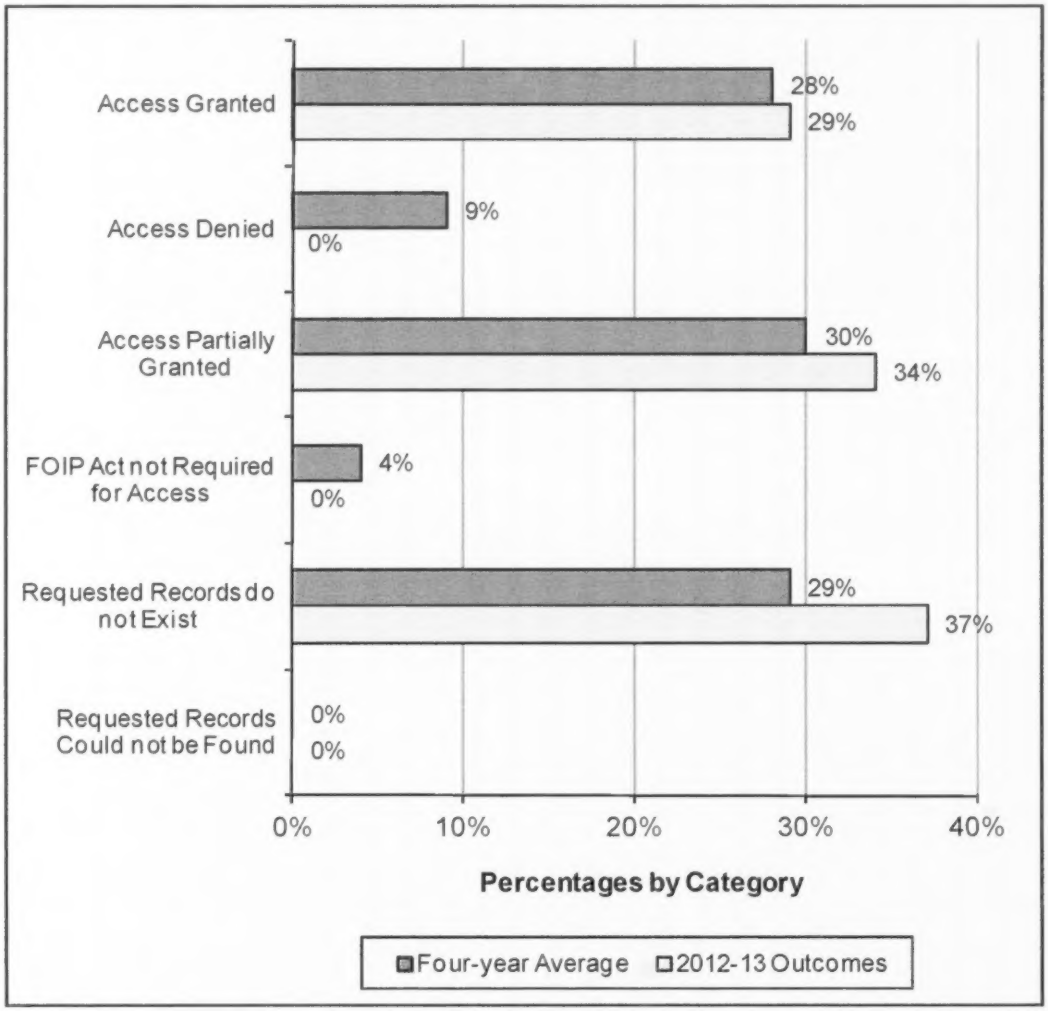

Figure 4 - See Tables A and D in the Appendix for more details

Note: Numbers are rounded and may not add up to 100 per cent.

Application Outcomes – General and Personal Requests Combined

The graph below shows how government institutions have responded to all access requests (both general and personal combined) in 2012-13, along with the previous four fiscal years.

For the 2012-13 fiscal year, 62 per cent of all access requests were fully or partially granted. This is equal to 2011-12 and above the previous four-year average of 59 per cent. In 2012-13, access was fully denied less than one per cent of the time and records did not exist for 37 per cent of the access requests processed.

2012-13 Compared to Four-year Average (2008-09 to 2011-12)

Application Outcomes Where Records Existed – General and Personal Requests Combined

The following graph shows how government institutions responded to access requests (both general and personal requests combined) where records existed that were relevant to the access request. Requests where records did not exist have been removed from the calculations.

In the 2012-13 fiscal year, access was granted in whole or in part 98 per cent of the time (53 per cent were fully granted and 45 per cent were partially granted) when records existed. The previous four-year average showed that 54 per cent of requests were fully granted and 33 per cent were partially granted.

Appeals to the Information and Privacy Commissioner

Section 49 of The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act provides applicants with a right of review by the Information and Privacy Commissioner:

- Where an applicant is not satisfied with the decision of a head;
- Where a head fails to respond to an application for access to a record within the required time; or
- Where an applicant requests a correction of personal information ... and the correction is not made.

Section 33 of the Act provides the Information and Privacy Commissioner with the authority to conduct privacy investigations.

Further details on reviews and investigations can be found in the Information and Privacy Commissioner's Annual Report available at www.oipc.sk.ca.

The total fees estimated can vary significantly from the total fees collected. The total fees estimated is the cost assessed to process applications as determined by the fee structure outlined in the Regulations. The total fees collected refer to fees actually collected from the applicants. The applicant has several options in regard to the fees. The applicant can: modify the application in order to reduce the costs, request a waiver of the fees, or decide not to pay the fees and therefore not receive access to the records. The Regulations (Section 9) are very specific regarding the types of circumstances in which the Head can waive fees.

The number of personal information requests and the number of general information requests carried over from 2009-10 do not correspond directly to the number of requests received in each of those two categories in 2010-11. However, when the two categories are combined, the number of requests carried over are the same as the number received. Eighty-two access requests previously classified as general were reclassified as personal requests. A number of these were carried over into 2010-11.
